

A rare collaboration will allow North Korean physicists to train in computational neuroscience at an Italian university. International sanctions ban other countries from teaching North Korean researchers in topics including the nebulous field of "advanced physics". Under the new deal, two or three students each year are expected to travel from Kim Il-sung University in Pyongyang to the International School for Advanced Studies in Trieste. (Fonte: Nature Briefing 28-03-19)